Candidates have until Tuesday to file

by Tony Fyffe BSN Managing Editor

Time is running out for candidates who want to run for public offices that will appear on the May election ballot.

Next Tuesday, Jan. 28, is the deadline to file for county, judicial and legislative offices, while candidates seeking city positions and school board seats have until August to enter those races, although a few have already filed their A total of 179 candidates have filed for the May 20 primary in Lawrence, Johnson, Martin and Floyd counties. The primary ballot will include an array of county offices such as judge-executive and sheriff along with judicial and legislative seats, which include circuit, district and appellate court judges, state representative and state senator, U.S. representative and U.S. Senate.

As of Tuesday, 36 candidates had filed in Lawrence County, 35 in Johnson County, 42 in Martin County and 43 in Floyd County.

In addition, seven filed for circuit judge, two for family court judge, five for district judge, seven for state representative, one for state senator and two for Court of Appeals judge.

The following is a list of candidates:

Area counties added to federal StrikeForce program

by Tony Fyffe BSN Managing Editor

Two days after unveiling his plan to widen the Mountain Parkway as a way to improve economic development in Eastern Kentucky, Gov. Steve Beshear joined U.S. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack and U.S Rep. Hal Rogers to announce two more initiatives that affect rural communities.

During a press conference in Pineville, Vilsack announced the addition of 73 Kentucky counties including Lawrence, Johnson, Floyd and Martin to the federal StrikeForce initiative, where the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) will partpursue needed investments into rural areas.

The report of December's Shaping Our Appalachian Region (SOAR) Summit in Pikeville was also released during the trio's news conference, recommending, among many things, immediate efforts to "help address the very catastrophic employment crisis in the coal industry.'

"All of today's announcements reveal a common theme - that thanks to our shared effort, vision, and cooperation, we are already seeing meaningful progress toward a new future for Appalachia as well as

Governor unveils plan for Mountain Parkway

FRANKFORT - The new state highway plan that Gov. Steve Beshear will recommend to the General Assembly includes his proposal for widening the Mountain Park-

"Eastern Kentucky faces a multitude of challenges, made all the more urgent by the rapidly shifting economy," Beshear said in announcing the plan Thursday. "Our people demand a thorough strategy that incorporates efforts to improve economic development and infrastructure for this region. Four-laning the remainder of the Mountain Parkway and extending it is a critical step in that process.'

The governor's plan includes a series of projects, totaling $753.6 million, by which the Mountain Parkway would be widened and thoroughly modernized by 2020.

Built more than 50 years ago and originally a toll road, the parkway runs west to east for 75.6 miles, from Interstate 64 near

SOAR: Counties added to program

many of our rural counties," Beshear said Friday. "The work of the SOAR initiative has not only captured the attention of our citizens, but has also attracted new partners outside our borders to share our work of revitalizing and reimagining this key region. The work is far from over, but we are off to a tremendous start."

StrikeForce

The USDA started the StrikeForce for Rural Growth and Opportunity in 2010 as "an effort to leverage partnerships in poverty-stricken rural areas to ensure that every community has equal access to USDA programs," according to a press release.

"Since that time, through StrikeForce, USDA has partnered with over 400 community organizations, businesses, foundations, universities and other groups to support 80,300 projects and ushered more than $9.7 billion in investments into rural America," the press release said.

By adding Lawrence, Johnson, Floyd, Martin and the other Kentucky counties to the program, the USDA will "aim to increase investment" in those communities "through intensive outreach and stronger partnership," the press release said.

"Through StrikeForce, we are able to reach people in new ways and bring resources to them directly," Vilsack said. "We are learning better ways to help communities leverage their assets and bring opportunity to their residents."

SOAR

More than 1,700 people attended the SOAR summit, which was held to gather ideas and recommendations on how to move the Eastern Kentucky region forward. The report released Friday "provides a compendium of all the comments and suggestions submitted to the initiative, and outlines common themes for focused efforts in the coming weeks, months, and years."

"The current economic crisis in Eastern Kentucky, coupled with federal and state government budget challenges, have taken the region's people over a 'tipping point,'" the report, prepared by the Rural Policy Research Institute, says. "They realize this crisis demands a new framework and they are ready to act. When 1700 Eastern Kentucky citizens take a day to attend a summit, and over one-third take the time to offer very thoughtful recommendations for future regional innovation, something historic is happening. The potential impact of what unfolded cannot be overstated, and it could well be landscapechanging for this region."

The report says Eastern Kentuckians know that "no one sector is driving this region's future" and that the region is "far too large, too sparsely settled, and lacking far too many critical regional wealth components to believe in a silver bullet."

"The citizens know that diversification must happen, that all sectors are necessary – but none sufficient," the report says. "Most recognize the coal industry will remain, but employ less, over time. Most also recognize this region will become increasingly multi-sectoral, if it is to thrive."

If the SOAR initiative is not successful, "it will be years, if not decades, before anything with this promise and potential scale will again be engaged by the region," the report says.

SOAR summit recommendations "fall into three distinct time horizons: immediate, triage-like requests; mid-term, organizational, structural and framework building requests; and longer-term efforts to create regional thinking, branding, marketing, planning, investing, and acting," according to the report.

"First focus on the immediate," the report says. "This includes efforts to help address the very catastrophic employment crisis in the coal industry; but it also should include taking low hanging fruit, with little cost - i.e., asset mapping, websites, 'one-stops', clearinghouses, 'connect-the-dots' linkages, data linkages, partnership meetings, service provision collaborations, inventory sharing, and a myriad of other collaborative possibilities. All these begin to weave the regional quilt, and demonstrate the very real value in collaborative thinking and

Also immediately needed is "coordinating" leadership, which "could be shared, perhaps across a Coordinating Committee, or some other interim governance body, until sustaining resources are secured and a regional governance structure agreed upon," the report says.

"Almost immediately, this Final Report will reignite offers of assistance from the many organizations, institutions, businesses and citizens who have committed to this effort and already see it as their own," the report says. "For this region, this is quite miraculous, and should not only be accepted, it should be praised. Many breakout group participants have already expressed interest in serving on working groups. So would many other citizens. Seek help to start those processes as soon as appropriate."

as soon as appropriate."

The process "must eventually result in a permanent structure and funding base.

ROAD: Governor issues Mountain Parkway plan

Winchester to Salyersville.

The westernmost 45.8 miles of the Mountain Parkway, from Winchester to Campton, has long been four lanes. But the remainder, a 29.8-mile section that runs through Wolfe, Morgan and Magoffin counties, is two lanes, with an occasional passing lane. Beshear's plan would make that section from Campton to Salyersville a four-lane highway.

The plan would then extend the parkway from Salyersville to Prestonsburg by four-laning 16.2 miles of two connecting routes - U.S. 460 and Ky. 114. At Prestonsburg, the new parkway would connect with four-lane U.S. 23 - creating a modern, fourlane corridor all the way from I-64 near Winchester to Pikev-

"As its name implies, the Mountain Parkway has been the principal connector between our eastern mountains and Bluegrass region for generations," Beshear said. "It's time Eastern Kentucky was provided the same, basic, four-lane access afforded to other regions of the Commonwealth. Not only does that provide access for Eastern Kentuckians to reach other parts of our state, but it creates an easier path for tourists and investors to stream into this vibrant region."

To finance the Mountain Parkway projects, the recommended highway plan proposes to use $595.6 million of conventional state and federal highway funds over the next six years and $158 million from the sale of toll revenue bonds. Although a tolling plan has not vet been devised, it is expected that tolls would be collected on the entire parkway, from Winchester to Prestonsburg.

The authorization to issue the bonds and collect the tolls will not be sought this legislative session. Although part of the overall project, they would not be needed until toward the end of the entire project, Beshear said.

"Setting a concrete schedule to four-lane the Mountain Parkway would be the most far-reaching thing the General Assembly and Governor Beshear could do for Eastern Kentucky this legislative session," House Speaker Greg Stumbo of Prestonsburg said. "It's time has come, and I want to thank Governor Beshear not only for his support of this project but also for his dedicated efforts in other areas to help this region prosper."

The work on the Mountain Parkway proposed by Beshear would likely be broken down into four parts for the purposes of contracts. The first phase would include the Mountain Parkway from Ky. 205 in Morgan County to Burning Fork Bridge near Salyersville. Phase two would include

U.S. 460 from Burning Fork Bridge at Salyersville, through a congested retail district, to Ky. 114. The third phase would include Ky. 114 from U.S. 460 at Salyersville to Ky. 404 at Prestonsburg.

The final section would include the westernmost part of the project area: the parkway from Ky. 191 in Wolfe County to Ky. 205 in Morgan

Communities

2014: What's coming and what's going!

by Kim Komando

Kim Komando hosts the nation's largest talk radio show about consumer electronics. computers and the Internet.

Technological change: It's not pretty. Our recent past is littered with millions of abandoned PCs and other gadgets. And when it comes to tech, the pace of change is increasing, not decreasing. That's my number-one tech prediction of 2014. Do you think things are dizzy now? Hold on, it's going to be a bumpy year.

I see changes looming and also a few products that, a year from now, we're going to be looking at in our rearview mirrors. Here's what I think is coming and going in 2014.

Coming:

Drones, drones and more drones

Drones are here already, of course. We saw that Amazon is testing drone delivery - and there's a company in Sydney, Australia, that has already put action to words. New in 2014 will be more and growing real-world uses. There are far too many companies working on the technology; even some states, now, are vying to be drone-development pioneers. The potential problems are obvious, from the inevitable privacy invasions from tiny camera drones to possible accidents and crashes. 3-D printers This year, we'll see more and more regular folks buying and using a fascinating product just a few businesses now use. Poke around online and you'll see downloadable plans for toys, novelties (like the clever promotional ploy of a key from the latest "Hobbit" movie), educational materials, tools and common household items. As the price of printers and materials come down, these products will become common. This will in turn turbo-charge an already dizzying new market of ever-more-wondrous plans and blueprints for things we never knew we needed. The implications for our economy are profound. On the science front, watch out for breaking news on organ printing, the frontier of a brave new world indeed.

Wearable tech

Google Glass is a puzzle. The device - glasses with a built-in smart phone and a video camera to boot - is already a joke in some tech circles, and boy are they pricey. ($1,500!) I'm not sure I like the idea of folks wandering around filming everything they see. But don't be surprised if they catch on in the coming year. Many other wearable products look promising, from the new breed of smart watches to socks that track your pace and blood pressure.

More and more tablets Look for cheaper more powerful ones, too. Forbes reports that growth in this realm is estimated at nearly 20 percent in 2014, a sizable figure for an already huge product. Apple is offering medium and small iPads and is rumored to be coming out with larger ones this year. Clearly, the rest of this decade will be the Age of the Tablet.

Frazier to speak at conference

LOUISA -Dr. Thomas H. Frazier, a gastroenterologist at Three Rivers Medical Center, will be a speaker Saturday, March 29, at the Ohio Society of Gastroenterology Nurses and Associates, 2014 GI Educational Update Conference in Fairfield, Dr. Frazier will speak on fecal microbiota transplants, a promising approach in the treatment of recurrent/resistant clostridium difficle infections.

Frazier has served as a staff physician/gastroenterologist at Three Rivers Medical Center since July 2011. In addition to treating liver disorders such as hepatitis C and performing endoscopic procedures such as a colonoscopy, Frazier's specialty areas include enteral stenting and ERCP. His research focuses on nutrition and obesity and nutrition for the critically ill obese patient. His work in the area of obesity-induced inflammation has led to the development of a tube feeding formula designed for critically ill obese patients. He is also performing capsule endoscopy in the office as a way of investigating diseases of the small intestine.

Burchett art on exhibit at BSCTC

PRESTONSBURG -The Art Gallery at Big Sandy Community and College Technical (BSCTC) has announced an exhibit by Martha Burchett.

Her display will run through Feb. 15 in the gallery, located in the Magoffin Learning Resource Center on the Prestonsburg campus of BSCTC. A reception will be held Thursday, Jan. 23, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. The event is free and there will be free refreshments.

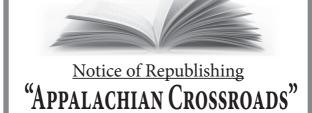

Burchett was born in Louisville, reared in Ashland and spent the last 35 years in Eastern Kentucky, living

Paintsville, Pikeville and now Prestonsburg. She became fascinated by painting in her 20s, after seeing the Armand Hammer Collection shown at the Huntington Museum

Coming face to face with a Rembrandt lit a determination to attempt to paint, she said.

This show chronicles the life and experiences of Martha since she started to paint," said BSCTC Art Gallery director Tim Sizemore. "Her work also demonstrates her flexibility as an artist."

STEPS TO HELP SAVE ON YOUR ELECTRIC BILL

It happens every winter. Customers open their electricity bills and see higher-thanexpected amounts due. While increasing energy costs are, unfortunately, becoming a bigger part of daily living, there are some actions you can take to reduce and control your electricity costs. First, remember you only pay for what you use. Any steps you take to reduce your electricity usage will save you money. The following are some energy and cost savings tips.

- Set your thermostat between 66-72 degrees
- Turn lights off when you leave a room; don't use lamps and overhead lights
- If you are not watching TV, leave the set off
- Install energy efficient light bulbs such as compact fluorescent bulbs (or CFLs)
- Properly insulate your home, windows and water heater
- Unplug cell phone chargers and other recharging/transformer devices when not in use

If you have questions about your electricity bill, contact Kentucky Power toll free, 24-hours a day, at: (800) 572-1113.

PIKEVILLE - When the Pikeville Collegiate Institute established a training school for teachers in 1901, the institution's founders had no way of knowing the fruits of their labor.

Since that time, hundreds of University of Pikeville graduates have made the classroom their life's work.

The Distinguished Educators Hall of Fame was established in 2010 to honor those whose contributions to education and to learning have inspired generations of students. A family and nine individuals, some of whom were awarded posthumously, were inducted during a recent cere-This year's inductees

Hellier High School in 1937 before enrolling at Pikeville College, where she earned her two-year teaching certificate and her bachelor's degree in elementary education. Officials say Bailey was the embodiment of Hellier High School, from the opening of the new building in 1937 until its closing in 1967. During the summers of 1887 and 1888, Blythe served as a supply pastor in Eastern Kentucky and grew to love the region and the people of the area. He came to know their needs, particularly their need for education. When he graduated seminary in 1889, the young Blythe was immediately invited to become the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Pikeville and principal of the Pikeville Collegiate Institute. education at Pikeville Junior College in 1945, but it was interrupted by military service. Once back from serving his country, he returned to college on the G.I. Bill and completed his bachelor's degree in education in 1953. He began teaching in the Pike County School System in a one-room school located at Poor Bottom. He taught grades K-8 with an enrollment of 44 students. He later taught seventh grade at Lookout Elementary. During his tenure in the school system's central office, he served as director of pupil personnel, supervisor of instruction, administrative assistant and assistant superintendent.

From a very early age, it was apparent to those who knew Colley that she was extremely bright, exceptionally passionate and extraordinarily gifted. Colley demonstrated both her love of learning and the depth of her determination by graduating from Wheelwright High School at the age of 14. She began her career in education at Elkhorn City High School. She then taught briefly at Pikeville High School before returning to Wheelwright High School, where she had the honor of serving as band director at her alma mater. In 1968, Colley accepted the position of band and choral teacher at Virgie High School, where she remained until her retirement in 1989. Craft has led a distinguished career in education, both as a teacher and as an administrator. Craft retired from Letcher County Schools in June 2013, where she served as superintendent for 12 years. She is a former preschool, Title I, and special education director for Letcher County Schools and guidance counselor for Letcher County Technical School. Craft developed music and drama programs that were recognized at church, in the community by the National School Board or her alma mater, Porter's

Association and the Kennedy

cation Network in 2007. She began piano classes for all third- and fourth-grade students because of the correlation to student achievement in mathematics and science, which was recognized by the Kentucky School Board's PEAK award in 2011. She established school-based health clinics in all Letcher County Schools in 2012 in partnership with Mountain Comprehensive Health Corporation, which has become a model for schools in Ken-

A well-known and highly respected educator, Francis spent the majority of his career sharing his teaching philosophy with the students and staff of Pikeville College. He received a basketball scholarship at Pikeville College where he obtained his bachelor's degree in secondary education in 1959. After graduation, he began his teaching career at Belfry High School. Fulfilling his desire to return to his alma mater, he joined the faculty in 1966 and spent the following 27 years serving as a professor, director of student teaching, vice president of student affairs and director of the Appalachian Graduate Consortium. He was inducted into the Pikeville College Athletic Hall of Fame in 1995 for his contribution as a member of the Bears' basketball team. Frank and Mattie Justice have long recognized the importance of quality educational opportunities for children. The desire to "give something back" began early with the couple, who spent many hours volunteering in school activities as their children were growing up. During the last several years, they strengthened their resolve to help others through the Frank and Mattie Justice Charitable Foundation.

native, Porter graduated from Betsy Layne High School, received her bachelor's degree from Pikeville College, where she was honored as salutatorian, and her master's degree as a reading specialist from Eastern Kentucky University. She served as an educator in the Floyd County School System for 36 years. She taught kindergarten at Mullins Elementary and music and reading at John M. Stumbo Elementary and Harold Elementary before spending 25 years teaching reading at Prestonsburg Elementary.

Turner, a state senator, says education has always been his top priority as a teacher, coach and administrator and throughout his legislative career. An educator for 28 years, Turner taught at Salyersville High School, McDow-Elementary ell School. McDowell High School and Johnson Central High School. He served as dean of students at Johnson Central High. Turner is a long-time basketball coach to both boys and girls and was named the 15th Region Coach of the Year in 2000. Turner began his service in the Kentucky State Senate in 2001, representing the 29th District. Even as a small child, Welch always wanted to be a teacher. Fulfilling her dream, she taught in the Pike County School System for 40 years, 39 years at Bevins Elementary School at Sidney following her first year at Sharondale Elementary School on Pond Creek.

Welch graduated as an honorarian from Belfry High School in 1955. She attended Pikeville Junior College for two years and graduated in 1957. She began teaching with two years of college while continuing her studies. attending summer school and Saturday classes. In 1960, she received her bachelor's degree from Pikeville College and later pursued a master's degree and Rank I from Morehead State University.

These are great products, and for all those HDTVs that were bought over the last decade, they are a godsend. But if you want a smart TV today, you can buy one. Roku, maker of one of the leading boxes, is already bringing out its own branded big screens. And we'll see if Apple follows suit with a top-of-the-line HD TV that incorporates its popular Apple TV. The trend I see: In many homes these boxes – and elegant variations like the tiny and cheap Chromecast will be relegated to accompany older TVs in dens and here: HDDs are the hard drives we all have on our desktops, laptops and bigger iPods, inside of which a tiny reader moves at impossibly high speeds to read gigabytes of data in milliseconds. The new solid state drives, or SSDs, do the same thing with no moving parts. They aren't even disks - they are really just giant thumb drives. Big, 500-gig SSDs in the swankier laptops are now common, and bang for your buck on these will rise exponentially. Smaller and much less susceptible to wear and tear, SSDs are the Copyright 2014, WestStar

Golden Eagles turn back Lawrence County

PAINTSVILLE - Johnson Central defeated visiting 57th District rival Lawrence County 69-65 at Paul R. Setser Eagle Fieldhouse Saturday night as head coach Tommy McKenzie became the all-time winningest coach in the tradition-rich boys' high school basketball program's history.

In his seventh year as head coach at Johnson Central, McKenzie, claimed career win No. 123, passing Wendell Wallen (1973-79) as the program's all-time winningest head

Johnson Central was 21 of 57 (36.8 percent) from the field. The Golden Eagles were four of 14 (28.6 percent) from 3-point range.

Johnson Central shot 60.5 percent (23 of 38) from the Junior guard Braxton Blair paced Johnson Central with a game-high 27 points. Blair was seven of 19 from the field.

Shane Hall scored 12 points and pulled down a game-high 17 rebounds for the Golden

During the district game, Hall, a Marshall University signee, recorded the 1,000th rebound in his career and moved into second-place alltime in the state in the blocks category.

Joining Blair and Hall in double figures, Slade McPeek added 11 points for the Golden Kyle Gullett scored eight points, Truman Salyer seven and Dalton Adkins three for Johnson Central in the win.

Johnson Central led at the end of each quarter. The Golden Eagles outscored Lawrence County 15-11 in the first quarter and led 33-26 at halftime.

Nick McKenzie connected on a free throw in Johnson Central's victory.

Johnson Central dominated on the glass, outrebounding Lawrence County 51-29

Lawrence County featured four scorers in double figures. Brandon Richardson led Lawrence County with 15 points. Timmy Dalton scored 13 points while Austin Chaffins and Robert Dalton added 12 apiece for the Bulldogs.

One of the 15th Region's top players, Timmy Dalton was injured in the final quarter and taken to a local hospital via ambulance.

Narrowly missing double figures, Grant Kiser netted nine points for the Bulldogs.

Josh Ratliff chipped in four points for Lawrence County in The Bulldogs shot 39.6 percent (21 of 53) from the field. Lawrence County was four of 16 (25.0 percent) from 3-point range.

The Bulldogs were 19 of 35 (54.3 percent) from the foul

Just missing a double-double, Robert Dalton pulled down nine rebounds to go along with with dozen points.

Richardson added eight rebounds for the Bulldogs.

For excelling both on and off the basketball court, Shane Hall of Johnson Central High School has been recognized as one of the finest basketball players in the country through his nomination to the 2014 McDonald's All American High School Boys Basketball Hall is one of 2,000 male prep basketball standouts in the nation nominated by the McDonald's All American Basketball Team Selection Committee, a group of nationally prominent basketball experts. As a nominee, the 6'9" Forward will be considered for one of the 24 positions on the final 2014 McDonald's All American High School Basketball Team that will compete in the 37th anniversary of the McDonald's All American High School Basketball Game.

This year's McDonald's All American Boys Game will be played Wednesday, April 2 at the United Center in Chicago, Ill., and will be broadcast live on ESPN at 8:30 p.m. (EST).

Proceeds from the game will benefit Ronald McDonald House Charities of Chicago and Northwest Indiana. The Ronald McDonald House Protion in 1974. Ronald McDonald House Charities® creates. finds and supports programs that directly improve the health and well being of children

One of the most exciting things about McDonald's All American Basketball Games is its rich history. Since 1977, over 800 male players have competed in the McDonald's All American Games, forming an elite list that reads like a "Who's Who" in basketball history. McDonald's All American athletes include Michael Jordan, Shaquille O'Neal, Lebron James, Kevin Durant, Patrick Patterson, John Wall, and Anthony Davis.

As a starter for the Eagles, Hall has averaged 19 points per game this season with over 11 rebounds and 5 blocks per game. Hall has amassed many honors during his basketball career at Johnson Central High School, including being ranked as one of 2013's Top Ten Players in Kentucky by Blue Grass Preps. Along with these honors, Shane has managed to break several school records in his career, including most free throws, blocks, rebounds and
